Military critics here are attempting to guess what Marshal Foch will do next. Critics credited with having inside information are displaying much ingenuity and variety in their descriptions of the coming moves on the different parts of the front, but the belief is fixed and confident throughout France that there is little danger of Gen. Ludendorff being allowed to buttress himself against the allied line. The Germans are a little out of breath by the pace Marshal Foch set for them, but they are unlikely to get a respite during the coming autumn and winter. It is assured that Marshal Foch will not let them go to earth, as was done after the first battle of the Marne.
